Changing Faces, Exhibition of Photography by Charlie McGeever in Civic Offices

Date of Release: Monday 5th December 2011

Changing Faces, an exhibition of photography by Ballina based photographer Charlie McGeever continues in the Civic Offices, Limerick Road, Nenagh until the end of January 2012. Changing Faces is an artist led community project supported by North Tipperary County Council which explores through the lens of the artist, the visual fabric of a small town on the border of Tipperary and Clare and celebrates its diversity through an exhibition of portraits of local people; capturing the essence of everyday life in the Ballina/Killaloe area.

In these remarkable portraits, the artist Charlie McGeever presents a moment in time in the history of Ballina/Killaloe. He has captured the diversity of life, the quiet contributors, the service providers, those working the land, each making their mark and re-asserting the importance of a diverse and unique society.

Speaking about his inspiration for the project, Charlie states that he became fascinated with the multi-layered make-up of the town of Ballina/Killaloe and observed on a daily basis, the mixture of old and new, physically represented by an ever-changing landscape and the eclectic mix of outlooks and values held by the people living there. Speaking of the exhibition, Charlie believes that these images represent a tiny moment in time in the lives of the people of Ballina/Killaloe, an area of constantly changing faces.

The exhibition will run until 27th January 2012 and will be open to the public from 9.30am – 4.30pm, Monday – Friday.
